Among Rome's many exquisite museums, the Borghese Gallery definitely stands out as a charming spot for holiday makers and Romans alike. Built in a vast park, -which in itself attracts a large crowd of people looking for busy cafés, a quiet bench to read a book on, or paths to stroll along- the Gallery occupies a large, white villa. It houses many works of art on two floors and in twenty rooms. The visitor can admire sculptures, frescos and paintings by many famous artists like Caravaggio, Raphael, Bernini and many others. Tickets should be booked beforehand, as –especially in season – it may be impossible to buy one at the entrance. Tourist should check if there are any temporary exhibitions planned for the time they are going to visit the museum: a few months ago there was a fascinating exhibition of Picasso's works, contrasted against classical sculpture. A truly unmissable event!
